

With one voice, we commit to creating libraries that:

- Listen to the changing needs of our communities through discussion forums, workshops, and personal stories.
- Connect community members to resources by forming alliances with businesses and interest groups. We grow these relationships by immersing ourselves in local organizations.
- Optimize customer convenience by improving the ease of access to our services while maximizing the value of every dollar.
- Cultivate a new technology landscape by connecting people with interactive systems that enhance our community's development.
- Foster economic independence of community members by providing materials and opportunities for people to develop their skill sets.
- Connect people from all walks of life to each other by providing a gathering place to share common interests and activities. We are the heart of our communities.

We, the library leaders of Eureka Institute 2009, believe in connections. We connect our communities through innovative, cultural and playful experiences.

With one voice, we commit to creating libraries that:

- Listen to the changing needs of our communities through discussion forums, workshops, and personal stories.
- Connect community members to resources by forming alliances with businesses and interest groups. We grow these relationships by immersing ourselves in local organizations.
- Optimize customer convenience by improving the ease of access to our services while maximizing the value of every dollar.
- Cultivate a new technology landscape by connecting people with interactive systems that enhance our community's development.
- Foster economic independence of community members by providing materials and opportunities for people to develop their skill sets.
- Connect people from all walks of life to each other by providing a gathering place to share common interests and activities. We are the heart of our communities.
